Washington

The "Evergreen State"

WASHINGTON WAS NAMED for our nation's first president, and became a state in 1889. Prior to then it was known as the Washington Territory, formed from the Oregon Territory in 1853.

The English first explored the Washington coast in 1579, followed by the Spanish. In 1792, Captain George Vancouver of the British Navy sailed his ship into Puget Sound and named many of the mountains, bays and islands.

The first large migrations of settlers to Washington began in 1836.

The western portion of the state is heavily forested and enjoys a very long coastline served by 12 ports.

Eastern Washington is separated from western Washington by the Cascade mountain range. Its geographic diversity ranges from densely forested and snow-capped mountain peaks to rolling hills of wheat to desert country.

There are numerous streams and rivers including the mighty Columbia which flows through the heart of eastern Washington.

The manufacture of transportation equipment is the number one industry in the state. The Boeing Aircraft Corporation, located in the Puget Sound area, is the largest manufacturer of commercial transport airplanes in the free world. The second largest industry in the state is agriculture.

Washington has three national parks, (Mt. Rainier, Olympic, and North Cascades), nine national forests, more than a thousand lakes and rivers and over 3,000 miles of shoreline.

Seattle is the largest city with a population of over 500,000. Next in size are Spokane (177,196) and Tacoma (176,664).
